Paraskevas Magiras was born in 1965 in Kalandra in Chalkidiki where he lives. He graduated from a Technological Educational Institution and he is a self-taught artist. His first sculptures were made of limestone in 1982. His influences come by ancient Greek sculpture as well as by his surroundings where he resides. In 1984 he attended drawing lessons, for a short time, next to the Dutch artist HANS VAN BEECK. In 1988 he met the sculptor George Sotiriou who provided him valuable advice and influenced his course. In 2000 he became a member of SKETVE, in 2010 a member of SKP and in 2003 a member of ETTE. He has participated in both personal and group exhibitions. His sculptures are mostly made by limestone and marble. Many of them belong to collectors both in Greece and abroad. He has published six books about Kalandra's peninsula and its story from the Stone Age until today. He maintains a laboratory and a permanent exhibition with sculptures in Kalandra in Chalkidiki.
